

Rodney Welch

Aboriginal man from the Narungga Nation (Blood ties with Kurna and Ngarrindjeri of South Australia)

Having 30 plus years' experience in Aboriginal justice and social justice: 22 years with the public sector, 4 years with non-government, 7 years with local government, over 10 years in a self-owned consultancy business with an extensive Aboriginal social and business network.

Working alongside the Aboriginal community, establishing cultural engagement and cultural practice, I have acquired the capabilities and skills in Community Development and Community Engagement, Program and Service Management, Training and Assessment, Negotiation and Dispute Resolution, Aboriginal cultural competency and a healthy experience in Aboriginal Justice and Social Justice.

Securing a Bachelor of Arts in Aboriginal Affairs Administration, an Advanced Diploma of Community Sector Management, a Certificate IV in Training and Assessment, a Certificate IV in Indigenous Leadership and a Certificate IV in Community Development, Vocational Graduate Diploma of Family Dispute Resolution and have over 25 years in Aboriginal Eldership mentoring.

My current role at the City of Port Adelaide Enfield is the Aboriginal Community Development Lead where I continue to progress my cultural experience.